As mentioned previously, Camp-X opened on the night of December 6, 1941 with the arrival of C.O. Arthur Terence Roper-Caldbeck and his officers. That first night, they visited the Officers' Mess for a couple of pints and then retired early to prepare for a very challenging week ahead; getting ready for the first group of 'Clients', or 'Agents-in-Training'.

The next day, Sunday, December 7, held a chilling revelation for the Commanding Officer and his staff unlike any other they had seen thus far in this 'war to end all wars'. That afternoon, while working in his office, Roper-Caldbeck received an 'OU' (urgent) message from the New York office of the B.S.C.; the Japanese had attacked Pearl Harbor early that morning, likely killing thousands of young American sailors.

The Camp was strategically located on the shores of ~~Lake~~ Ontario in order that personnel from the American C.O.I.
